I continue to believe his proposal to be inappropriate, unrealistic, extraordinarily expensive and way above market. However, perhaps we should verify this by looking at the yearly totals of Macau's local legal expenses (non- HK, US etc.,) over the last 2-3 years to see how far off the mark he really is. Maybe my opinion will change based on the facts (at least of his proposal, not of him).

Some of his comments and reasoning (e.g., Macau is biggest part of LVS therefore not unreasonable to pay more to a Macau firm) are illogical and nonsensical.

Been a long time since I've seen a lawyer or a firm make as naked a power play as has LA. He sure has chutzpah.
